COMMANDER'S CALL

Be a risk manager on the job and at home

By BRIG. GEN.

Commanding General

Fort Jackson

Army stresses safety with monthlong campaign

any of us took time to enjoy fun with friends and family while savoring the great outdoors this past holiday weekend and will continue to do so throughout the summer. As we begin National Safety Month and continue into the 101 Days of Summer — the period from Memorial Day through Labor Day — this is a great time for each of us to evaluate our own personal safety habits, both on and off duty. One of the Seven B's of my Leadership/Command BRYAN T. ROBERTS Philosophy, "Be a Risk Manager," centers on setting the highest safety standards and managing risk 24/7 with the tools available to you.

The well-being of every member of the Fort Jackson community remains uppermost in my mind. During the past three years, off-duty fatalities between April and September have increased 20 percent Armywide.

I ask you to remember that Composite Risk Management applies on the mission, on the job and on the weekends. Always take a moment to consider the potential hazards associated with any activity and implement effective measures to mitigate the risk.

The U.S. Army Combat Readiness/Safety Center has put together a truly outstanding National Safety Month Campaign that provides tips, tactics and procedures to help you remain safe throughout the summer and all year long.

Visit the Combat Readiness/Safety Center website at https://safety.army. mil/ to take advantage of the many resources and learn more about how you can incorporate safety into your everyday tasks at work and home.

The "Take 5 for Safety" Campaign encourages you to take responsibility for your safety, as well as the safety of those around you. Whether you're grilling out, spending time on the water, or simply enjoying the sunshine, remember these five principles:

- ☐ Make safety a commitment to your-
- ☐ Fight complacency and take pride of ownership in your safety.
- ☐ Leaders must stay engaged and realize they are just as accountable for their Soldiers' actions as well as their own.
- ☐ Senseless loss or injury can and should be prevented. It's up to you.
- ☐ Stop accidents before they stop you. Be your own risk manager.

Another key component of the safety month campaign is driving safety. Four of every five Soldiers killed in personal vehicles in 2011 lost their lives between the beginning of April and Labor Day. Lack of discipline continues to be the predominant factor in vehicle and motorcycle accidents, so please do everything you can to educate your Soldiers — as well as Civilians and Family members — on the importance of using seat belts and personal protective equipment, as well as the dangers of speeding and driving under the influence of alcohol and drugs.

The same principles hold true for water-related activities, where there is little to no margin for error. We must all remember that safety is a day-today commitment and responsibility. Just a moment's inattention or an unwise split-second decision can have tragic consequences.

Your leadership has been charged with ensuring you have the knowledge and tools you need to stay safe, but please don't hesitate to also engage the Fort Jackson Safety Center staff members for additional assistance by calling 751-6004. They provide a wide variety of products and training.

Victory Starts Here, let's not let it end here — the Army and Fort Jackson need each of you in the fight!

Army Ball looks to connect Soldiers with tradition

By WALLACE McBRIDE

Fort Jackson Leader

This year's Army Birthday Ball will be an opportunity for Soldiers and their families to reconnect with military tradition.

Fort Jackson in celebrating the Army's 237th birthday June 16 at the Columbia Convention Center with an event designed to help Soldiers returning home from war participate in ceremonies with deep roots in military tradition.

"Some of those Soldiers have been at war for 10 years," said Lt. Col. Ricky Earleywine, Army Ball project officer. "Many of them are young Soldiers who have never been to an Army Ball. They've missed out on some of our traditions because they were either deployed, or getting ready to be redeployed. They just haven't had time for it."

The ball was moved off-post to the Columbia Metropolitan Convention Center to allow for a greater attendance from Soldiers who, in previous years, did not have the option to attend. Last year's onpost event accommodated 500 people. This year's event at the convention center is designed for 800 people, Earleywine said.

"The city has been most cooperative in making the two parking garages open so people don't have to pay," said Ike McLeese, President and CEO of the Greater Columbia Chamber of Commerce. "It's a great opportunity to help spread the Army message and get the community more involved. We call ourselves the most military friendly community in the country and realize we have to earn that privilege every day."

"This is an all-ranks ball," Earleywine said. "We'd love to have it on post, but it limits the number of people who can attend. The convention center's been great and they've bent over backward to help us. Because this facility is so much larger, we can open it up to all ranks. We can get those Soldiers who have been in the Army for three years or less to attend."

"We're working day in and day out," said Capt. Kenyada Wallace, one of the organizers of the event. "It's something that's near and dear to all of our hearts. These Soldiers have been in this war for so long. I think it's a good thing for everyone to take part in it."

Fort Jackson's Army Family Team Building program is also conducting a protocol and etiquette course for military families to help them get acquainted with military customs prior to the ball. Set for June 8, Army Ball 101 will offer instruction in formal attire, receiving lines, table etiquette and other Army customs.

Veronica Patrick, AFTB program manager, said there have been a number of questions on Fort Jackson's Facebook page about proper attire, especially from military spouses.

"Some people were not sure what to wear," she said. "We want to help make sure that everyone who attends is comfortable in this environment. We're going to cover some of the history of the ball, and will have instruction on table etiquette and receiving lines.

"And we'll have a portion about what to wear," she said. "We want to let women know they don't have to spend a million bucks to look like a million bucks."

The ball is open to anyone who wants to attend, she said. For more information about Army Ball 101, call 751-6315.

"We're expecting a wide range," Patrick said. "Our goal is to make sure all of them are comfortable, that they know Army etiquette and protocol to better their experience."

Fort Jackson is continuing its partnership with the Columbia Blowfish baseball club and the Greater Columbia Chamber of Commerce to celebrate the Army's birthday with a baseball game.

Now in its fifth year, Fort Jackson Night treats military families to a free night of baseball as the Columbia Blowfish take on the Gastonia Grizzlies, two collegiate summer baseball teams in the Coastal Plain League.

"We feed a little over 4,000 Soldiers hot dogs and refreshments," said Ike McLeese, president and CEO of the Greater Columbia Chamber of Commerce. "It's just an impressive sight to see that many Soldiers having a good time."

The event will also allow organizers to introduce veterans of past conflicts to the audience, he said.

"They always arrange for us to honor heroes from past conflicts," McLeese said. "We put them in a golf cart and drive them out between innings. The Soldiers are really inspired when they realize who they're seeing and what their story is."

The event takes place at 7 p.m. June 9 at the Capital City Stadium, located at 301 S. Assembly St., Columbia.

The game is free to anyone in the military, McLeese said. Tickets can be picked up in advance from the Chamber of Commerce before June 7, or at the Blowfish Stadium Ticket Office on game day. For more information, contact <code>rsvpchamber@columbiachamber.net</code>.

Edwards to receive fatherhood award

By WALLACE McBRIDE

Fort Jackson Leader

Fort Jackson 1st Lt. William Edwards has been selected as the recipient of the Military Fatherhood Award by the Fatherhood Initiative, the organization announced Tuesday.

Edwards, who is assigned to Company E, 1st Battalion, 34th Infantry Regiment, was among the 450 men originally nominated for the award, and was named one of the three finalists presented to voters on the National Fatherhood Initiative's Facebook page. In the end, Edwards received the most votes.

"It's awesome," Edwards said. "It's shocking. I'm surprised that I won. The other two guys are great fathers, and everyone had a great story."

The National Fatherhood Initiative will present Edwards with the Military Fatherhood Award in a ceremony scheduled to take place at Fort Jackson the week of Father's Day, which is June 17.

'My kids are really excited about all the support we've had on Facebook," Edwards said.

While deployed in Iraq for more than a year, Edwards stayed involved in his four children's day-to-day activities through letters, e-mail and webcam conversations. He also shot and edited original video of his daily activities during deployment to help stay connected with his family.

Coordinating responsibilities with the Army and his family has required discipline, even when deployments are not involved, Edwards said. He makes sure each of his children, who range in age from 6 to 12, gets his or her own day with him during the week.

He also plays in a band with them, called Eddie's Experiment. The oldest child, David, plays keyboards in the band. Elena, 8, plays drums, while Jacob, 11, plays bass. Luke, 6, is currently happy to dance as the band plays.

BCT Soldiers keep their cool during Southern summer heat

By ANDREW McINTYRE

Army News Service

Drill sergeants and Basic Combat Training company commanders have a number of ways of keeping Soldiers cool during the summer heat.

Capt. Erik Johnson, company commander of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 13th Infantry Regiment, keeps an eye on all the Soldiers of his company from the firing range tower to ensure they show no signs of dehydration and perform well on the range.

Johnson explained that one of the main ideas he stresses to the Soldiers is a "buddy-check" system. This system is applied throughout the company. Soldiers should check one another to make sure their battle buddies do not show signs of dehydration.

As Soldiers return to their gear from the firing line, they are required to fill their 32-ounce hydration backpacks immediately. Soldiers are encouraged to drink about 1 1/2 quarts of water per hour to avoid heat injury.

"On the very hot days we provide an Arm Immersion Kit for the Soldiers," Johnson said. "This kit enables Soldiers to roll up their sleeves and immerse their arms in an ice bucket of water to allow the blood temperature to drop for cooling during the hot days."

As the temperature rises, the drill sergeant cadre members and commanders will continually watch the heat category status. Depending on the heat category, the Soldiers will alter their uniforms to allow more air to pass through in an effort to keep cool, Johnson said.

BCT companies follow an Armywide heat category system in order to effectively designate how much training should take place in certain heat conditions and the amount of required water in-take.

Another method used to monitor Soldiers' hydration is the Ogden Cord that all BCT Soldiers wear on the collar of their uniforms. The cord consists of black beads that are attached to a piece of string. These beads indicate how many quarts of water the Soldier has taken in.

"Ogden beads are just one more way for us to keep track of the Soldiers' hydration," Johnson said.

If a Soldier has had previous heat injury issues, he or she will wear red beads. Soldiers with previous cold injuries wear blue beads. Soldiers with allergies wear yellow beads because some allergy medication is affected by heat, said Sean O'Brian, director of For Jackson Safety.

"Every time a Soldier drinks a quart of water, he or she is required to move one bead up on the attached string," Johnson said.

Pfc. Andrew Chewning of Ohio said he usually drinks three full hydration packs of water a day.

"It's not difficult at all to stay hydrated in this heat. I just drink throughout the day," Chewning said.

Memorial Day event honors nation's fallen

Leader Staff Report

More than 300 people took the opportunity Monday to remember America's fallen service members in a Memorial Day ceremony at Fort Jackson National Cemetery.

"This Memorial Day, we honor and celebrate our military men and women who gave the last full measure of devotion to our country," said Brig. Gen. We shall never forget them or fail to honor them."

The solemn nature of the observance was underscored by a wreath laying, which was followed by the lowering of the flag to half staff, a rifle salute by the 171st Infantry Brigade, and the playing of Taps.

VOLUNTEER SPOTLIGHT

Volunteer heeds call to ministry

By WALLACE McBRIDE

Fort Jackson Leader

VOLUNTEER: Ruben Vargas

ACTIVITIES: Hispanic Protestant Worship Service Minister

Fort Jackson 2012 Volunteer Hall of Fame inductee Ruben Vargas was looking for guidance after leaving the Army. A knee injury made his future in uniform look less than exciting, he said, but he knew he wasn't ready to step away from the Army after more than 15 years of service.

"I had an accident and ended up with my knee needing surgery," he said. "I would have had a level three profile, which wouldn't have allowed me to hardly do anything, so I just decided to get out. God wanted me to get out so I could do his will."

He was invited to become a music pastor at Fort Jackson, and decided it was a good way to meet his needs, as well as the needs of Soldiers.

"I already had a job at Fort Riley," he said. "But I prayed about it. I told God what I wanted to do, but that I didn't want to receive any money for it. I just wanted to volunteer my time. So, I said, 'Give me a job where I am able to do this.'"

The Hispanic worship service at Fort Jackson, he decided, fit the bill.

"The ministry started the Hispanic service in 1993," he said. "When we started we had 20 people. We've got about 500 to 600 Soldiers now."

Growing pains took their toll on the congregation, which moved to several different locations over the years. They currently meet at the Fort Jackson Post Theater. They meet each Sunday morning, and Vargas spends time with Soldiers and their families on Wednesdays during Family Day

"I'm the pastor now," he said. "I'm the only civilian pastor in basic training. I spent half of my life in the military. When I got out, I still had the feelings to help and be around the troops. I know the things they go through and wanted to help."

ACS, USCIS schedule immigration workshop

By JANICE WATKINS
Army Community Services

Going through the immigration process can be an intimidating experience. Various questions and concerns may arise and range from simple to complex.

What happens if someone chooses to enter the country without authorization or proper inspection? What happens to foreign nationals who stay longer than the time the government granted them? What happens if they violate U.S. laws while trying to obtain citizenship? What if they don't have the money to pay the application fees?

The process of obtaining immigration assistance can be complicated and expensive. However, the Army provides free resources to eligible ID card holders. In an effort to make sure that Soldier and family members get the proper answers and guidance, the Army Community Services Relocation Office and the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services have partnered to provide a workshop on immigration called "Immigration 101."

This workshop provides information on how to apply for permanent residency and citizenship, how to petition for a family member to come to the United States, and answer any other questions you may have. The next workshop is scheduled for 10 a.m. to noon, July 26 at the Strom Thurmond Building. The workshop will be offered again Dec. 13.

For more information and to register, call Miranda Broadus at 751-1124 or email miranda.broadus@us.army.mil. The workshop is open to all ID card holders

Post students have chance to audition for Secret Garden

By THERESA O'HAGAN

Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation

An audition for the Missoula Children's Theatre production of The Secret Garden is scheduled for June 18 at C.C. Pinckney Elementary School. Roles are available for students entering first grade through 12th grade.

Approximately 50-60 local students will be cast to appear in the show with the MCT tour actor/director. However, there is no guarantee that everyone who auditions will be cast in the play. Students wishing to audition must arrive by the scheduled starting time and stay for the entire two-hour session. The first rehearsal begins about 15 to 30 minutes after the audition. Auditions will start 10 a.m.

Children who wish to audition must be registered with Child, Youth and School Services. Registration is free and is done at the Parent Central Services office at the Joe E. Mann Center, 3392 Magruder Ave.

This is a group audition — no advance preparation is necessary, but a smile never hurts. Students should just be ready to come and have a good time.

Rehearsals will be conducted every day, June 18-21 from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. at C.C. Pinckney Elementary School and the SKIESUnlimited Family Center. Although not all cast members will be needed at every session, those auditioning must have a clear schedule for the entire week and, if selected, be able to attend all rehearsals required for their roles.

A detailed rehearsal schedule will be distributed at the conclusion of the audition. Cast members scheduled for the full rehearsal will be asked to bring a sack lunch or snack.

The performances will be at C. C. Pinckney Elementary School. The students in the cast will be called for dress rehearsal before the performance that day. All those cast must be available for all scheduled performances.

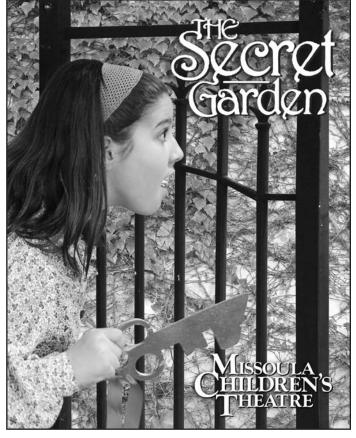

In 2010, more than 50 children participated in an MTC production at Fort Jackson.

"It was an awesome experience," said Cindy Andre-Noel, Parent Outreach Services, CYSS. "The children enjoyed it."

This year, more than 65,000 cast members across the globe will take to the stage to the delight and applause of their families, friends, community members, neighbors and teachers. The residency at Fort Jackson is made possible by CYSS and the Army Family Covenant.

The Missoula Children's Theatre, the nation's largest touring children's theatre, has been touring extensively for 40 years now from Montana to Japan, and will visit nearly 1,200 communities this year with up to 47 teams of tour actor/directors. A tour team arrives in a given town with a set, lights, costumes, props and makeup — everything it takes to put on a play, except the cast.

All MCT shows are original adaptations of classic children's stories and fairy tales. Also included in the residency are three enrichment workshops presented by the tour actor/directors. Creativity, social skills, goal achievement, communication skills and self-esteem are all characteristics that are attained through the participation in this unique, educational project. MCT's mission is the development of life skills in children through participation in the performing arts.

The Missoula Children's Theatre is based in Missoula, Mont., and also runs many local programs. These include musical theatre day camps and performing arts classes for local children, a summer residency performing arts camp for students from around the world and the Missoula Community Theatre, which creates an arena for local talent of all ages to participate in large-scale productions and attracts audiences from western Montana.

For students interested in a career in the performing arts, MCT has developed Next Step Prep — The Academy for Musical Theatre, providing high school students an affordable opportunity to train and study with well-known professionals in the field of music, dance and acting to prepare for college. For information, email nextstep@mctinc.org.

For any questions regarding the Fort Jackson production, contact Michele Mirabal at 751-5384.

ROAM tracks unscrupulous businesses

From the Legal Assistance Office

Holly Petraeus, the assistant director for the Office of Servicemember Affairs at the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau announced in January the agency's launch of a database to track fraud aimed at service members.

The Office of Servicemember Affairs was established in 2011 with a mission of promoting financial education of military members and their families, monitoring and addressing consumer scams targeted at military members, and improved consumer protection measures at the state and federal levels. The new database, called ROAM (Repeat Offenders Against Military), is the result of a collaboration between the CFPB, the Department of Defense and state attorneys general. ROAM will function like a central database for all companies and people who repeatedly target military personnel, and will be accessible by all state attorneys general, U.S. attorneys and judge advocates from all five branches of the armed forces, which will help streamline investigations.

"During my visits to military communities across the country, I continue to hear stories of service members and veterans being defrauded by businesses that see our troops as easy targets for a quick profit," Petraeus said at the database launch.

Retail stores located near military installations frequently prey on service members and their families, aggressively pushing them into financing contracts for grossly overpriced electronics and other goods. Rome Finance Co., an unlicensed lender that went by the name of SmartBuy, was one of the main offenders, whose actions led the CFPB's Office of Servicemember Affairs to establish the database. The company violated the Truth in Lending Act by failing to disclose the interest rate as well as the final price of the product, and many service members signed contracts without understanding that they were actually opening a line of credit. Although SmartBuy claimed interest rates were between 10 and 19 percent, already a high amount, the interest rates wound up averaging more than 200 percent once undisclosed markups, compounded kickbacks and other fees were incorporated.

for Payment purchase contracts with SmartBuy were set up as allotments from a service member's military pay. If a service member defaulted on payments, SmartBuy and its affiliates would illegally contact the service member's commanding officer. The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act prohibits creditors from contacting employer an unless one of the following exceptions applies: The debtor has consented in writing to the communication; the creditor is contacting the employer for the purpose of effecting wage garnishment after a court judgment; the creditor is contacting the employer for the purpose of discovering medical insurance if the debt is a medical debt; or the creditor is verifying the debtor's employment. Despite the laws prohibiting creditors from contacting commanders, unscrupulous financing companies do not hesitate to threaten service members that they will contact their chain of command if they do not comply with their terms.

A Tennessee court entered a $10.8 million judgment against Rome Finance Co. in 2008 for its fraudulent practices. The company reached a $3.5 million settlement in New York in 2011. Although such lawsuits brought media attention to the problem, it was not enough to put a stop to the practices.

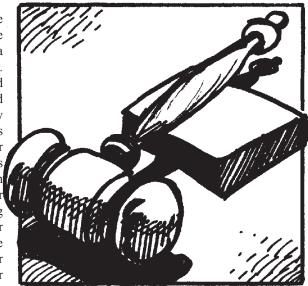

Attorneys general in various states have been frustrated that a company exposed for exploiting the vulnerable military community then moves its scheme on to another state. New York Attorney General Schneiderman, who spearheaded the lawsuit Rome Co., believes that had the database existed "during our investigation of SmartBuy, we likely could have shut them down more quickly and saved countless service members thousands dollars each."

ROAM's collation and organization of information is expected to foster greater awareness and communication among state and Federal agencies. The centralized resource enables law enforcement officials to prevent further scams and take swifter action on individual cases of fraud and deception had been recorded in a centralized resource

Service members should always be wary of stores offering financing and special deals, and are encouraged to seek advice from a legal assistance attorney before signing any type of contract.
